

Ten things every Christian should know about Islam

By Zane Pratt

1

“Muslim” and “Arab” are not the same thing.

Muslim is a religious term. A Muslim is someone who adheres to the religion of Islam. Arab is an ethno-linguistic term. An Arab is a member of the people group who speak the Arabic language. It is true that Islam originated among the Arabs, and the Qur’an was written in Arabic. However, there are Arabs who are not part of the religion of Islam, but rather have historically been part of the ancient orthodox Christian churches. On the other hand, Islam spread far beyond the Arab world, and today most Muslims are not Arabs. This includes the Turks, the Kurds, the Iranians, the Pakistanis, other South Asian Muslims, the Malaysians and the Indonesians, almost all of whom are Muslim but none of whom are Arab.

2

The word “Islam” means submission.

A Muslim is someone who submits to God. The Islamic conception of who God is, and how he is to be worshiped and served, is based on the teaching of Muhammad. Thus, the Islamic creed is: “There is no God but God, and Muhammad is his prophet.”

3

There are two major denominations of Muslims.

Sunni and Shi’a. Sunnis are the majority, at 85% of all Muslims. The split occurred in the first generation after the death of Muhammad, and it was based on a dispute over who should succeed him as leader of the Islamic community.

4

Islamic theology could be summarized as belief in one God, his prophets, his books, his angels, his decrees and the final judgment.

Islam teaches that humans are born spiritually neutral, perfectly capable of obeying the requirements of God completely, and that they remain this way even after they have personally sinned. The need of humanity, therefore, is not salvation but instruction, so Islam has prophets but no savior.

5

Islam teaches that Jesus was a great prophet.

It affirms that he was born of a virgin, that he lived a sinless life, that he performed mighty miracles and that he will come again at the end of history. It even calls him a word from God. However, it explicitly denies the deity of Christ. It repudiates the title “Son of God” as blasphemous. It also (according to the majority view) denies that he died on the cross, claiming that the visage of Jesus was imposed on someone else, who was then crucified, and that Jesus was taken up into heaven without tasting death. Islam explicitly denies the possibility of substitutionary atonement.

Islam is a fast-growing religion, especially in the Western world. Increasingly, Christians need to be aware of Islam and, most importantly, how to engage adherents with the gospel of Jesus Christ. Here are ten things I learned about Islam during my 20 years as a missionary in a Muslim-majority country that I think every Christian should know:

6

Islamic practice can be summarized by the Five Pillars of Islam.

These comprised of the confession of faith (“There is no God but God, and Muhammad is his prophet”), prayer (the ritual prayers said in Arabic five times a day, while facing Mecca and going through the prescribed set of bowings, kneeling and prostrations), alms (taken as a tax in some officially Islamic countries), fasting (the lunar month of Ramadan, during which Muslim believers fast during daylight hours but can eat while it is dark) and pilgrimage (the Hajj, or pilgrimage to Mecca, which every Muslim believer should make once in his or her lifetime).

7

The vast majority of Muslims are not terrorists.

In fact, normal Islamic religious law forbids the intentional killing of non-combatants in battle, and it also forbids suicide. It is a small minority view that allows these things, and it is a small minority who engage in terrorist activities.

8

Muslims can be some of the friendliest, most hospitable people on earth.

They make great neighbors and great friends. No Christian should be afraid to build a relationship with a Muslim.

9

Muslims need salvation through Jesus Christ.

They are lost exactly like any other non-Christian, neither more nor less than anyone else. Furthermore, Muslims do come to faith in Jesus Christ. It usually takes time, and extended exposure to the Word of God and the lives of Christians, but more Muslims are coming to faith today than at any point in history.

10

God loves Muslims, and so should we — even those few who are our enemies.

We should love them enough to befriend them, love them enough to make them welcome in our homes and love them enough to share the gospel with them.
